DIE FACHBUCHHANDLUNG

Preface

Fellow Reader,

This Handbook delivers manifold perspectives on data strategies worldwide. Policy cycles, concepts, instruments, and effects of data strategies are mapped and analysed. The contributions focus on different parts of the world and combine different disciplinary angles. An overview of the contributions (§§ 2–9) can be found in the Introduction (§ 1 mn. 8 et seq.) to this book. Common starting point of the chapters was the Global Data Law I: Global Data Strategies Conference to which the authors contributed. The conference was held in Passau in September 2021 and was organised by the University of Passau Research Centre for Law and Digitalisation (FREDI).

I do first and foremost thank the (co-)authors for their wonderful contributions which made this Handbook possible – especially bearing their manifold other obligations in mind. Furthermore, I am more than grateful for my wonderful team at the University of Passau. Their motivation and effort brought the conference and this Handbook to life. Johanna Hähnle, Academic Research Assistant at FREDI, deserves my greatest thanks for her esteem dedication in leading the coordination of various activities, especially – and always kindly – “managing” authors and contributions. Furthermore, I do thank Dr. Patricia Boshe, Senior Researcher at FREDI, as well as Josefine Ehrlicher and Timo Hoffmann, Academic Research Assistants at the Chair for European and International Information and Data Law, for supporting the review and final editing process. Dr. Boshe also took over the lead for the Global Data Law II: African Data Protection Laws Conference held in Accra in September 2022. In addition, I do also thank our excellent student research assistants, Matthias Biller, Josefine Dittmar, Franziska Fahl, Johanna Heidbrink, Julia Lebmann, Johannes Schwarzbauer, and Clemens Spirkel, who took the main burden of formatting. Finally, Hildgund Kulhanek deserves our applause for her always thorough, helpful, and focussed support from the publisher’s side.

We do sincerely hope that you, fellow reader, will enjoy the following chapters. We look forward to your feedback and thoughts. Please drop us an email to fredi.digitalisierung@uni-passau.de.

Sincerely yours,
Moritz Hennemann
